How we work ?

We propose an open space dedicated to the meeting of ideas, actions, and people that seek to generate empirical knowledge about contemporary social problems. Thanks to cooperation with academic institutions, centers of interdisciplinary research, and citizen groups in different countries, Human Mount maintains an observation of analysis on current issues, publishes reports on case studies, and carries out innovative research/action projects in order to give new perspectives on these problems.

Research programs

Active new media community-and-academic collaborative blogging (i.e., Internet/ video/ new networking technologies)

Innovating local and digital humanities experiences

What challenges we are interested in being an active part ?

The digital age produces new social experiences, new spaces of interaction, and new perceptions of everyday life. The current challenges of the human being reside in the understanding of their practices, collective and individual, paying particular interest to the influence of those practices on the physical, cultural, economic, and transcendental dimensions of their existence

BASED ON

Central Questions

- How we decide to act together at a specific time ?
- How to understand the paradox of the contemporary individualism in front of the emerging collective structures ?
- How the city imageé reconfigures the urban spaces of tomorrow ?
- How to understand human differences, the construction of identities, and the intergenerational and intercultural exchanges in a globalized world ?
